BRYAN HURRIES TO HEAD OFF WILSON

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The whole world that William J. Bryan had not yet definitely accepted the position of statesman, but in coming to Washington nearly a week before the inauguration to prepare the way for Wilson, was made today for Senator John W. Kern of Indiana, who was Mr. Bryan's running mate in his third effort to obtain the Presidency. He dominated Mr. Bryan will be here Thursday evening.

A representative of this, when I do not care to come, come to Washington today and after consulting with some of Mr. Bryan's friends, engaged quarters at the New Willard, which will be occupied by Mr. Bryan, Secretary of State after the inauguration. He will look for a public, single residence.

This statement by Senator Kern, released from the mouth of one of the latter's friends, the late fighting of Mr. Bryan is to be in the "Editorial," "What is the Bryan," said one Senator after he had called on Mr. Bryan, "that he is not afraid of Wilson. All through the inauguration, he is big gun in the administration and he wants to be here one month ahead of the inauguration so he can get a part of the benefit."

It was learned today that many friends of Lewis Nixon of New York, who were urging his name for the Secretaryship of the Navy and that, President-elect Wilson is favorably considering him.

JUST MORMON FROM SCHOOL BACK RAY

Mormon missionaries, disguised as students, have been discovered in several high private schools.

The presence of these students has stirred the faculties of the different institutions, and when a Mormon teacher is found he is asked either to resign teaching Mormonism or to leave the school.

Mormon literature was picked up in one of these schools by a reporter of the AMERICAN.

Recently the wife of a Mormon after having been requested to leave one of these schools, she was found to be inflicting a large class of young women about Mormonism and what it taught. She claimed women were more favored, either to raise than any other system.

In School Two Months. This woman, registered at the Curry Hotel in Exeter, in the Plaza Building as Mrs. Frank Hayes of Vermont, was welcomed and assigned to a class, but about one month after she began her studies, it was rumored that she was teaching Mormonism. Mrs. Curry, one of the principals of the school, remembered with her and told her not to teach Mormonism while she was a student.

Mrs. Hayes then denied that she was a Mormon, but upon being pressed for a vindication of herself, finally acknowledged that she was a Mormon missionary.

She was then told that she must leave. Mrs. Curry, the principal of Exeter, in reference to the incident, said:

We do not care what religious belief our students have. This is a matter that does not in the least concern us. All that we ask them to do, while in our school, is to be attentive to the studies before them.

We could not afford to turn our school into a place for a Mormon propaganda. No distinction is made between the different religions.

We simply could not tolerate this person spreading her ideas about Mormonism to our students. Leaving the school and trying another boarding school, Mormonism we also would not tolerate.

There was no alternative except to ask her to leave, which she did.

LITERATURE IS LOVE CAN, SAYS MRS. ATHERTON

Boston young women with literary tendencies are warned by Margaret Atterton, the novelist, that love and literature don't mix.

"The literary woman doesn't marry as long as she can make a success of anything else," says Mrs. Atterton. "Then she adds this disconcerting note: 'There is no time left for the woman writer to be a wife.'"

Mrs. Atterton was asked to talk on literature, love and her political campaigning to President-elect Wilson after she arrived in New York.

She presented an interesting picture, especially for a woman who has written so much on the idea of literary woman.

Twenty years ago, when I began to write, women who wrote were looked upon and quoted—and speculated—Annie Hall and I were driven from the room and what you will. Nowadays, women who write are as numerous as the stars in the sky.

But no one will pay even a small attention to them to remember their names. They are not remembered. Whether the literary woman's position has improved according to your own view.

The literary woman does not marry as long as she can make a success of anything else.

Quite seriously though, the literary temperament needs nothing and has NOTHING. I know—I have them; a month in the same house, a man, people drive me to the edge of the desert.

But I am not a person of talent. Talent and to be forced by her work.

For the woman writer who is a person of talent, talent and to be forced by her work.

"DIAMANTH" IS GIVEN PREMIERE IN AMERICA

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"Diamanth," an opera by Hlad, the composer of "Carmen," was sung for the first time in America at the Boston Opera last night.

Hlad has been dead some thirty-five years and "Diamanth" is one of his earlier works. It was given because it contains a good part for Lucille Marcell and it was directed, of course, by Felix Weingartner. Luckily it is not a good thing to deliver into the hands of a great writer or composer and pull out his best work. There are always well-meaning people to dig buried treasures out of the waste-basket of poets and authors who are suddenly deemed, and for the most part justly, to be of no more use than the waste of a great man, even his least important work, are apt to have something of grandeur running through them.

"Diamanth" is not lacking in traces of genius. It contains much that is explosive, especially in its orchestral coloring. Several fascinating melodies are given to the voice. The original effect is most gorgeously achieved, and the whole is nothing lacking. Even with a perfect performance, which it did not last night, I am afraid its finality would cause it to take success.

Dream of Exotic Colors.

"Diamanth" takes place in an Arabian harlem. Hlad, the master, is bound with his beautiful mistress and she proposes to deliver her to his steward, a dancing girl and assumes his costume. He loves her, not woman, the abstract, not the concrete, in an act which would be beautiful if it were well sung.

Diamanth loves her master and objects to the exchange. She displays herself as a dancing girl and assumes his costume. He loves her, not woman, the abstract, not the concrete, in an act which would be beautiful if it were well sung.

There is considerable spoken dialogue, too, but it is not very good. The music is an original dream by Felix Weingartner which would do for the opera.

The setting is in Urban's best style, a dream of exotic colors and designs, with a rich green tropical night scene through a huge, round lattice.

Lucille Marcell sings the Oriental idea of beauty. Her costume is very daring. Miss Marcell's dancing is very good. Her voice is compared to that of the famous singer. The rich scene music is well sung and it was well worth the production to hear her sing.

"Pagliacci" follows.

Laffitte has a good voice, but he is far from being a finished singer. It is hard to tell just how far from it. He would have seemed had he been a better singer. Laffitte made a good impression.

Glacioso is an admirable actor, but the rest of the opera is not very good. He is allowed to sing in the opera. He is a very good actor. He is a very good actor. He is a very good actor.

The opera was followed by a performance of "Pagliacci" and "Carmen." It was an excellent performance.

The opera should be to be "Diamanth," again, with an improved cast. It is unlikely, however, that it will be.

Plays That Remain.

The last weeks of "The Garden of Allah" are being announced at the Boston Theatre.

Only last week's reviews for theatregoers to enjoy the quality review of "Daisy Miller" at the Theatre.

"The Red Petticoat," with Miss Lewis, as one of its stars, is at the Theatre.

"Believe Me, Xanthippe," continues to draw a property to the Court Theatre.

"The Yarns" will remain at the Park Theatre for only two weeks more.

Tonight! Take a "CASCARET" SURE

No Sick Headache, Biliary Stomach, or Constipated Bowels by Morning.

Turn the stomach out—the headache, the biliousness, the constipation, the sick, sour stomach and foul gas—turn them out tonight with Cascaret.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or a sour stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascaret cleanse and regulate your stomach; melt the bile, clear the undigested and fermenting food and that's the only way to get rid of it. One little box from your liver and carry out of the system all the long, slow, waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. It works while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store, or a box of Cascaret, will melt the bile, clear the undigested and fermenting food, and that's the only way to get rid of it. One little box from your liver and carry out of the system all the long, slow, waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.
